

I am against any further deregulation of cable and media companies. I believe the public interest is not served when larger monopolistic conglomerates buy up the smaller cable and media companies. In effect we the public are subjected to higher fees and less access to the free press, to exchange ideas and be more fully informed of the truth. Although there is a pretext that censorship is not allowed in this country, the fact that information is being disseminated by fewer and fewer public TV stations, cable networks and smaller newspapers is just another form of information censorship, coming from the minds of large centralized media corporations.
